Weisbaden in Germany.

Weisbaden is not merely a place of summer, resort. The proof of that is known by the fact that the gamb'ing tables are kept open for eight months in the year. There are many people who reside here in the winter months in the hotels, when they reduce their charges, or live en pension, or have a floor of rooms and keep houses for themselves. The climate is a pleasant one, the hot fire below continually kept up to keep the spring water boiling having possibly some effect upon the atmosphere. Winter and summer the temperature of this water never changes, and when the outside temperature is low, a cloud of smoky steam covers the surface of the bubbling mass. It is not alone to drink the water or to take the baths that people reside here. It you do not like this treatment there are plenty of other "cures" which you can resort to. Near the boiling spring, which is appropriately called the Kochbrunnen and opposite the verandah, there is a shop from which are served all the mineral waters of Germany. You can take them there before breakfast or at midday or in the afternoon. Close by the spring is a woman with buckets full of whey, which you can swill until you are filled with whatever is left of milk after every particle of nutrition has been extracted from it; and a little way up the Neroberg is a cold water cure, where from first cost. you can be packed and scrubbed and drenched and drowned and then drenched internally until you would think that any disease not more obstinate than an evil spirit would give up in despair and depart from a body where it was allowed to have so little rest. Then close by there are other cures. In fact one never knows how many ills flesh is really liable to, un-til one comes to Germany and hears of the "cures" which seem indeed to be more abundant and of tener much worse than the diseases. Not far off there is a pine cure for consumptives, then there is a cure of pine cones, the former cure consisting in drinking, the latter in bathing; then there is a mud cure, where you are half buried in slime and filth; and a wine cure, which disgusts you even with the best of liquors; and a starvation cure, where you are put on cold bread and allowed to drink nothing but light wine until your throat parches, your tongue gets thick, and your body, having nothing to feed upon, devours the tumors which fill the inside of your system and create pustam disease-so say the peasant doctors. Finally there is the grape cure, which lasts for about six weeks, when you consume your time in masticating fresh grapes and separating stems and skin from the pulp. You learn to eat six or eight pounds easily, "by way of a flyer," and this cure has this advantage, that, like Bryon's Turk, who was asked to eat, ABSOLUTISM SOFTENING.—The Kaiser is finding the way to his people's hearts. He attended a shooting festival recently in Vienna, and tossed off a mug of beer, took a few shots with the rifle, scattered pleasant compliments right and left, put everybody in good humor, and went away with the admiration of the crowd following him. Being asked to drink a goblet of wine after his mug of beer, he merely sipped the more aristocratic beverage, remarking that if he drank all that was handed to him? the natural consequences would follow, . When he had made a couple of close shots with the rifle, he gaily laid the weapon aside, observing that he must stop there, or he would not do so well. He expressed pleasure at finding the women taking part in the shooting contests, and offered hearty praise to a crack marksman from Norway, who was using a gun of his own invention. These little intimacies between modern Emperors and their people it is pleasant to record as affording evidence that, while we of the Grand Republic are going up into Despotism, they, by a sort of international seesaw, are going down into Democracy. - Richmond Whig.

A FEAST OF FAT MEN .- A curious gathering of portly men took place at Gregory's Point, Connecticut, on the 20th ult. The occasion of this gathering was a clam bake to which no guest was invited who did not cause the scales to kick the beam at two hundred pounds averdupois. And these heavy-weight champions were all to be from Fairfield county. There should certainly be something remarka-ble in the air, the diet, and physical conditions of life generally in this county, since it furnished to the clam bake no less than thirty-nine men, the lightest of whom weighed 200, and the heaviest 315 pounds, while the combined weight of the thirty-nine was 1,766 pounds.

The number of clams eaten by this formidable party is unfortunately not given in the account from which the foregoing particulars are

END OF THE WORLD. - A German savant has discovered that this globe we live on is gradually shrinking, by the process of cooling, which has been going on since its creation. In the lapse of time, the contraction will draw all the continents below the water level except a very few high points, which will be the residences of such few human beings as may be able to get on them. These human beings will be modified and transformed to suit the changed condition of things. But, for the satisfaction of the present generation, it is stated that these changes cannot be effected in less than five hundred millions of

A man was in a photographer's the other day, when it was the hottest, to sit for a picture. "How long will I have to wait?" he inquired. "Only a minute, while we prepare the plate," replied the operator. "Plate," ejaculated the sitter, wiping rivers of perspiration from his face, "it I keep on sweating like this, no plate will hold me—you'll have to take for sale by me in a soup-bowl?"
